

Key Leadership

Meet the dedicated people who are helping make Enso Village a reality.

Enso Village Board of Directors

Spencer D. Hamrick Jr. has been with Wells Fargo since 1980 and now serves as Strategic Initiatives Manager for commercial banking and real estate financial services. He holds a BA in economics from Guilford College and has served on numerous boards of nonprofit organizations with a focus on cultural, civic and world affairs.

Paul Kuenstner is executive director of the Association for Preservation Technology International, a nonprofit organization of architects and engineers who specialize in historic preservation of the built environment. Previously Paul spent 20 years with the Fidelity Foundation working with nonprofit organizations around the country. Paul has a master's degree in architecture from Columbia University and an MBA from New York University. He is a board member of the American Public Gardens Association.

Rob Lippincott is an education technology entrepreneur and investor with a 30-year track record of achieving financial success for public and private enterprises. As the former senior vice president of education at PBS, Discovery Education, Pearson Company and the Family Education Network, he led the creation of media and technology products that are used in more than half of U.S. schools. Rob has taught at the Harvard Graduate School of Education, among other schools.

Gregory W. McClune is a partner and litigation lawyer with Foley & Lardner LLP. He is also a former member of the San Francisco Zen Center board, which he served on for six years. Gregory moved to San Francisco in 1977 and has lived there for more than 40 years.

Zesho Susan O'Connell currently serves as the Enso Village Spiritual Director. She has served in many key positions at San Francisco Zen Center, including as vice president and president from 2006-2016. Susan received priest ordination from Tenshin Reb Anderson in 1999, was head monk (shuso) in 2004, and was given dharma transmission in 2017.

William Rosenzweig was founding CEO of The Republic of Tea. At the University of California, Berkeley, Will developed the country's first MBA courses in social entrepreneurship and social venture development. Will is an advisory board member for the Culinary Institute of America, a role in which he has served in since 2012. In 2015, he founded and later served as the dean of the Food Business School at the CIA.

Susan S. Temple, of Kennett Square, Pennsylvania, retired in 2013 as Associate Head of Westtown School. Susan is a former member of The Kendal Corporation Board of Directors. Before her work with Westtown School, Susan was a school counselor and practiced child and family therapy.
